Feminists from India and Pakistan Issue Urgent Call for Peace and Dialogue Amid Renewed Conflict

“We reject the logic of war—rooted in colonial borders, toxic masculinity, and nationalist propaganda”

New Delhi / Islamabad, 12 May 2025 — In a show of historic cross-border feminist solidarity for peace, over 10 organizations and approximately 1000 people have come together to issue a powerful statement calling for immediate de-escalation, dialogue, and justice in the wake of renewed hostilities between the two nations. The signatories include feminists, peace activists, artists, journalists, academics, students, grassroots organizers and other professionals from India and Pakistan. The statement unequivocally condemns the recent terror attack in Pahalgam, Kashmir. It highlights how such attacks are cynically used to inflame communal tensions and justify militarisation, while silencing those who call for peace. The signatories express their disappointment at India’s unilateral decision of suspension of the Indus Waters Treaty; and the retributive decision by both countries to cancel medical and short-term visas causing distress and leading to family separation, especially of children from their mothers. The statement expresses deep concern for the loss of life on both sides and emphasizes that wars have no winners.

Reflecting on the fact that the past year has seen a global surge in armed violence, and devastating images from Gaza and other conflict zones that have become so routine on social media platforms, the statement says that ‘we are tragically getting desensitised to the true horrors of armed conflict’.

It further states that, “The ceasefire must be the first step in a long, difficult walk towards justice and peace”. Denouncing the naming of India’s military operation as “Operation Sindoor,” a deeply patriarchal invocation that exploits female-coded symbols for nationalist ends, the statement emphasizes that war only benefits arms dealers while devastating women, children, and marginalized communities.

Organisational endorsements include(in alphabetical order):

Pakistan: Aurat March(Islamabad and Lahore); Women’s Action Forum(chapters: National, Hyderabad, Islamabad, Karachi, Lahore, Peshawar, and Quetta)

India: All India Democratic Women's Association; All India Feminist Association(NAPM); All India Progressive Women's Association; ANHAD; Forum Against Oppression of Women; Hazrat-e-mamuli Zindagi; Saheli Women's Resource Centre; Vimochana forum for Women's rights; Where are the womxn, (Hyderabad)

Together the signatories call on the governments of India and Pakistan to:

- To consolidate the 10th May ceasefire, desist from cross-border violations and defuse rising tensions by keeping channels of communication open;
- To jointly initiate an investigation, including international representatives, into the Pahalgam attack with a view to bringing the perpetrators to justice;
- To refrain from unilateral actions such as disrupting the Indus Waters Treaty;
- To prioritise and engage in dialogue and diplomacy to resolve differences;
- To work towards resolving the core political issue of Kashmir that lies at the heart of the conflict.

Urgent Call for Peace by Indian and Pakistani Feminists

The ceasefire is just the first step in the long walk to justice and peace

11 May 2025

We, feminists from India and Pakistan, unequivocally welcome the ceasefire declared by our two nations today. The tension and escalation of the last fortnight remind us of how fragile peace is. The ceasefire is also a vindication of calls for de-escalation and peace by lakhs of ordinary people on both sides of the border. Even as we hope this indicates an absolute cessation of hostilities, we recall the recent events.

We condemn the terror attack in Pahalgam that killed 25 tourists visiting Kashmir from different parts of India and one from Nepal. One local person also lost his life in the Pahalgam attack. The targeted attacks deepened the communal divide between Muslims and Hindus in India and were exploited to incite hatred, fear, and calls for collective punishment.

In the aftermath of the Pahalgam terror attack, it is the women—including as mothers, daughters, sisters, wives—who are left holding the unbearable weight of grief. Instead of respecting and sharing it, it has been weaponized and policed—especially when it refuses to follow the script of hate. Himanshi Narwal, the young widow of one of the slain victims, was among the survivors who amid unimaginable pain still found the strength to appeal for peace. She asked people not to direct their rage against Kashmiris and Muslims who, like her, are trapped in a cycle of violence they did not create. For that simple act of humanity, she has been trolled, vilified, and attacked by chest-thumping nationalists more committed to blood lust than truth.

Linking the terror attack with Pakistan, India immediately suspended the Indus Water Treaty, and revived hydro-electric projects and dam construction previously constrained by the treaty. Both sides cancelled short-term visas for visitors. We have witnessed heartbreaking scenes from the Attari-Wagah border where Indian and Pakistani women with the 'wrong' passports were forced to hand over their children to their husbands before crossing over to 'their countries', creating unfathomable distress for the women themselves, their children and their families.

Fourteen days later, India carried out air strikes and Pakistan retaliated, followed by drone strikes by both countries. Misinformation campaigns on both sides have made truth difficult to ascertain. One thing is certain though: the loss of human life, widespread fear and an escalating spiral of violence alongside the possible terror of grave and irreversible ramifications for people across South Asia as a whole that tensions between the two nuclear powers could result in.

We, as feminists, are fundamentally anti-war and anti-militarism. We denounce the war economy that thrives on violence and destruction, and the deeply patriarchal structures that fuel and sustain it. The naming of India's operation as Sindoor, a profoundly patriarchal gesture, is a stark reminder of the misogynistic propaganda employed by both sides. Between loved ones there are also many other private and specific symbols, of which Sindoor, to some women, could be one. But when Sindoor becomes a war cry it erases and weaponises pain, and reduces women to bodies on which the masculinist nationalist fantasies of conquest, violence and rape are mounted.

The past year has been marked by a surge in global violence, with devastating images from Gaza and other conflict zones becoming a daily occurrence, tragically desensitising many to the true horrors of armed conflict. Indian and Pakistani governments and opinion-makers seem uncaring of the catastrophic consequences of war and the immense devastation it would cause. Only those who are manufacturing and selling weapon systems to our governments will benefit from war. War further entrenches, exacerbates and perpetuates existing inequalities, disproportionately affecting women, gender and religious minorities as well as children. Such hostilities serve as a distraction from what people really need: education, health, employment, social protection, safety and well-being.

We, feminists from India and Pakistan, firmly believe that war is never the solution. We call for a dismantling of power structures that sustain violence. The logic of war—rooted in nationalism, toxic masculinity, and colonial-era borders—must be rejected. In both countries, women activists, journalists, and peace-builders have long advocated for dialogue, de-escalation, and diplomacy. Yet, our voices are consistently sidelined and overwhelmed by the inflammatory rhetoric and assertive militarism that dominate the public sphere.

We call on the governments of India and Pakistan:

- To consolidate the 10th May ceasefire, desist from cross-border violations and defuse rising tensions by keeping channels of communication open;
- To jointly initiate an investigation, including international representatives, into the Pahalgam attack with a view to bringing the perpetrators to justice.
- To refrain from unilateral actions such as disrupting the Indus Waters Treaty;
- To prioritise and engage in dialogue and diplomacy to resolve differences.
- To work towards resolving the core political issue of Kashmir that lies at the heart of the conflict.

We urge feminists around the world to raise their voices in solidarity and join us in resisting war and building peace. There is no time or space for complacency.
